DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1 and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Martin (4,859,183). Martin discloses a root canal instrument with a metallic needle part (Fig. 2, #12) and a handle (Fig. 2, #14). The handle is made of homogeneous silicone rubber (Column 3, line 2), and therefore maintains the desired properties such as coefficient of friction and hardness described in claims 1-5 and 7, since, according to the applicant's specification, silicone rubber was the idealized material which met these claimed limitations. Silicone rubber is also not perfectly continuous, and therefore somewhat porous or "substantially continuous." Martin also discloses a dual layer handle with an outer thin layer of silicone and an inner layer of differing material (Fig. 3). Silicone rubber is also shape deformable.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2-3, 5, and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Martin. Marin discloses the claimed invention with the exception of the specific coefficient of friction and the hardness of the handle material(s) are within the given ranges. However, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to make the handle out of a material with these properties, since it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a known material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice. In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 10/27/2005 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Based on the applicants definition of "substantially continuous" material in the remarks section, silicone rubber falls within this category of material and Claim 1 now falls under a 102(b) rejection. The applicant also discloses that silicone rubber is an ideal material for the handle, therefore indicating that it meets the specific physical properties of coefficient of friction and hardness. Furthermore, as mentioned above, it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a known material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice. In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416.

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-7 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection. The combination of Marin and Ruddle is not a necessary for the current rejection.
